Halifax House Price Index

National Index

September 2006

All Houses, All Buyers Index (1983=100)

Index (seasonally adjusted)	Monthly Change -	Annual Change 10.7%
642.4	0.6%
Standardised Average Price (seasonally adjusted) £198,500

Key Points

- House prices fell by 0.6% in September. Overall, house prices increased by 0.9% in Quarter 3. This compares with increases of 2.3% in 2007 Quarter 2 and 3.0% in Quarter 1, marking a continuing steady downward trend in the rate of house price growth since the end of 2006.
- A mixed pattern of monthly price rises and falls is a typical feature of a more subdued housing market. For example, there were three monthly falls and three monthly increases during the first half of 2005 when the market slowed following the rapid rises in the preceding few years.
- The annual rate fell to 10.7% in September from 11.4% in August. The annual rate should decline further over the next few months as the strong monthly house price increases during the autumn of 2006 drop out of the year-on-year comparisons.
- House prices increased in most regions – especially in the south of England – during the third quarter. The biggest price rises were in Greater London (2.3%) and the South East (1.8%). Nonetheless, the gains in Greater London and South East were lower than in previous few quarters, suggesting that the market is slowing in these parts of the country.
- The UK economy is in a strong position. Sound market fundamentals, including high levels of employment and a shortage in the number of properties available for sale, continue to support house prices. Gross domestic product (GDP) increased at an annual rate of 3.1% in 2007 Q2, comfortably above the long-term average rate of 2.5%. The number of people in employment has risen by 132,000 over the past year and is at a historic high.

Commenting, Martin Ellis, Chief Economist, said:

"House prices fell by 0.6 per cent in September. Overall, prices in Quarter 3 were 0.9% higher than in the previous quarter. This compares with increases of 2.3% in 2007 Quarter 2 and

3.0% in 2007 Quarter 1, marking a continuing steady downward trend in the rate of house price growth since the end of 2006.

September's price fall is consistent with the normal behaviour of the market during a slowdown. A mixed pattern of monthly price rises and falls is a typical feature of a more subdued housing market.

The UK economy is in a strong position. Sound market fundamentals, including high levels of employment and a shortage in the number of properties available for sale will continue to support house prices."

House price growth slows again in Quarter 3.....

Overall, house prices increased by 0.9% in 2007 Quarter 3. This compares with increases of 2.3% in 2007 Quarter 2 and 3.0% in 2007 Quarter 1, marking a continuing steady downward trend in the rate of house price growth since the end of 2006.

.....and market activity also eases

Mortgage approvals to fund house purchase fell by 5% in August to 109,000 (seasonally adjusted). Approvals were 9% lower than in August 2006. (Source: Bank of England)

The level of new buyer interest in purchasing a house fell for the ninth successive month in August, highlighting that potential buyers have become more cautious. (Source: RICS)

Sound fundamentals support the housing market

A strong economy and healthy labour market will provide a sound underpinning for the housing market over the coming months. Gross domestic product (GDP) increased at an annual rate of 3.1% in 2007 Q2, comfortably above the long-term average rate of 2.5%. (Source: ONS)

The number of people in employment has risen by 132,000 over the past year to a record total of 29.07 million. There was an 84,000 increase in employment during the three months to July compared with the preceding three months. (Source: ONS)

Continuing supply shortages of both new housebuilding and secondhand properties for sale will also support house prices.

Interest rate effect is increasing as borrowers come off very low fixed rates

The CML estimates that around 1.3 million borrowers took out fixed-rate mortgages in 2005, and a further 1.5 million in 2006. The majority of these mortgages would have been fixed for two years. A borrower with a £114,000 mortgage – the average in 2005 - taken out at the average two year fixed rate in 2005 of 5.08%, would be making monthly repayments of £669.02. When the deal expires this year, the new monthly repayments would be £771.35 – an increase of 16% or £102 - assuming that the borrower moves onto the current average two year fixed rate of 6.58%.

The overwhelming majority of borrowers coming off fixed rate deals are expected to be able to absorb the increase in payments. Most people's earnings will have risen since they took out their mortgage – average earnings have risen by 8% over the past two years - providing more income to finance the higher interest payments. House prices have also risen strongly in the past two years providing an equity cushion for new borrowers.

The Bank of England recently estimated that the resulting 'payment shock' will reduce the annual post-tax income growth of the household sector by only 0.1 percentage points.*

Static 'real' income growth in the first half of 2007 is also constraining housing demand

Household disposable income in 2007 Q2 was unchanged from the level in 2006 Q4 once the effects of inflation are removed. (Source: ONS)

South sees highest price rises in Q3 but signs of slowing in London and the South East

House prices increased in most regions during 2007 Q3. The biggest price rises were in Greater London (2.3%) and the South East (1.8%). Despite recording the biggest price rises in the UK in Quarter 3, the gains in Greater London and South East were lower than in the previous few quarters, suggesting that the market is slowing in this part of the country.

Fall in Northern Ireland but this follows phenomenal growth in recent years

There were house price falls in Northern Ireland (-3.2%) and the North (-2.1%). The fall in Northern Ireland simply partly offset some of the 8.2% increase in the previous quarter and must be set against the background of a spectacular 47% rise in house prices in the year to 2007 Quarter 2. The modest decline in the North should be seen in the context of the substantial price rise (122%) recorded over the past five years.

Slowest house price growth in the past year in northern England and midlands

All 12 regions of the UK have recorded a rise in house prices over the past year. Five regions have seen double digit growth: Northern Ireland (29.1%), Greater London (18.6%), Scotland (14.2%), the South East (13.7%) and East Anglia (11.1%). The remainder of the country has experienced single digit growth with the smallest increases in the West Midlands (4.7%) and the North West (5.2%). More generally, northern England and the midlands have seen the lowest house price growth in the past year.

Inflation Report, August 2006*

NOTE: The 10.7% number is the quarterly year-on-year figure. This figure provides a much better picture of underlying trends compared to a monthly year-on-year number as it smoothes out any short-term fluctuations.
